About Magoroto Forest Estate

The 591 hectares sized Magoroto Forest Estate with its scenic freshwater lake was opened in 1896 by German Settlers as one of the very first commercial plantations in Eastern Africa. Originally, the Estate began as a rubber plantation. After subsequent failed attempts to grow coffee and tea, it was converted into a Palm oil Estate in 1921. Seized from the German owners as “enemy property” after World War 1, the Estate was taken over by the Amboni Group in the 1940s. The palm oil production ceased in the 90s due to stifling competition from Malaysia and Indonesia. Since then Magoroto has been maintained and protected with great enthusiasm and engagement for little else than its unique natural beauty and uniqueness.

Along with the neighbouring Mlinga Forests, Magoroto forms part of the East Usambara Mountains, which are world-renown for their high species endemism and rich floral and faunal diversity.

They are recognized as part of a "Biodiversity Hotspot" (WWF & IUCN), an "Important Bird Area" (Wildlife Conservation Society of Tanzania – WCST) and a "Man and Biosphere Reserve (UNESCO). African Violets (Saint Paulia) have been promoted as flagship plants for the conservation of these forests.

As a genuine "hilltop" station with a mountain lake, Magoroto is a uniquely interesting nearby getaway destination for tourists from Tanga and neighbouring cities. Its 800 metres altitude provides for comfortable climatic and stunning views on the low lands below.

The Estate has been opened to the public in early 2018 and has grown popular amongst locals and tourists through its experiential campsite and vast outdoor activity offerings.

Location and Geography

Magoroto Forest Estate is situated in the East Usambara Mountains in Muheza, Tanga. The East Usambaras form part of the mountain chain called the Eastern Arc which ranges from Southern Kenya to Southern Tanzania.

These mountains are known for their high levels of species endemism and rich floral and faunal diversity.

The East Usambara Mountains have been likened to the African equivalent of the Galapagos Islands in terms of their endemism and biodiversity.

They are considered to be one of the most important forest blocks in Africa, if not the most important.
